Sir

I beg to apologize for troubling you again; but in my last I forgot to enquire whether the marriage of my Mother to Rawlings might give to any of his relations a prior right to the said £200. When Rawlings married my Mother he had no property of any kind, all belonged to my Mother, who inherited it from my Grandfather John Jennings. As a proof of this, at the close of the long Chancery suit of Rawlings versus Jennings, he did not receive a farthing, it was all paid over to my Brothers and myself. I remain Yours truly
